Who's calling 455?

Bell adds
new exchange for Haliburton

SHERYL LOUCKS

Staff Reporter

If you've been given a telephone number starting with 455 for someone in Haliburton and think that it's a mistake, dial it anyway because odds are it is correct.

Bell Canada spokesperson Catherine Hudon says her company has realized there are few 457 numbers left and so are now giving people 455, a new NNX or exchange.

"Why 455? We try to find a number that is fairly close to what is already there in the area," says Hudon.

She says she did not know the maximum number of 457 numbers, only that the company saw an end of them in sight. The new 455 exchange went into use this April although residents can still request a 457 number.

She says availability of the old exchange depends on the number of people moving out of the area and giving up their numbers.

"There has been an increasing demand because of fax lines, internet lines and cellular phones. Definitely in the last four to five years there has been an explosion in growth of the number of phone lines and numbers that are being used," says Hudon.

She says the process for selecting phone numbers is random so if you are setting up a new telephone system there are no guarantees which number you will get.

A Stuart Baker Elementary School competitor heads past a group of screaming children on his way to the finish line of the JDHES cross-country regional competition on Thursday. Top ten finishers in primary and junior, as well as top six in intermediate and senior, will earn berths to the district cross-country meet in Lindsay. See details on page 9.

New campaign to help families cope when their children become ill

MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

A young child is desperately ill and has to be admitted to the Hospital for Sick Children in Toronto. Distraught, the child's parents leave everything behind in Haliburton County so they can be with their child. Days turn into weeks. Not only are the parents not earning as much money because at least one of them has to stay in Toronto, but it's expensive to live in a city where you have no family.

The bills pile up. The bank account dwindles. Finally, the parents have no choice but to cut off the hydro to their house.

A new fundraising campaign hopes to prevent this from ever happening again.

The Emergency Paediatric Campaign, an off-shoot of the Community Health Services Foundation, which successfully raised enough money for the new cardiac care unit at the Peterborough Regional Health Centre, wants to build a nest egg of $1.2-million. Interest from this fund would give them $6,000 a month to give to families who find themselves in financial distress when a child becomes critically ill.

"It's precious work," Mary Helen Moes, the campaign's executive director, told county council on Wednesday. "The children need us and we need you."

She was not asking the county to give a financial donation. Instead, she wanted the politicians' help in spreading the word about the campaign.

And support she got.

"I'm ecstatic," said Warden Eleanor Harrison. One of her daughters was an outpatient at Sick Kids for 18 years. In all those days and months spent in Toronto, "I was fortunate I had family there, but I saw a lot of people who didn't. I have no idea what I would have done without the wonderful family support I had in Toronto."

She says she saw many parents who slept at the hospital because they couldn't afford to

Cancer Society here to help

FIGHTING CANCER can be physically and emotionally challenging enough without having to worry about such things as how you're going to get to your chemotherapy appointment in downtown Toronto or finding enough money to buy a wig. The Haliburton and Minden branch of the Canadian Cancer Society wants to know how its volunteers can help local cancer patients. People are invited to a community open house on Wednesday, Oct. 2 from 7 to 9 p.m. at St. Anthony's Roman Catholic Church Hall in Haliburton. The branch, which had fallen out of service for several years, will also be honouring the contributions of local long-serving volunteers. For more information call Vince Connaughan, a volunteer driver, at 457-2509.

Have you ever had that sinking feeling, that 'oh no, what have I done?' feeling. That's how a Haliburton woman felt when she realized that an album of cherished baby photos was sold at a yard sale on the Old Donald Road recently. If you bought that album and can help the woman retrieve her photos, please call 457-1286.

Local reeves have been invited to join politicians from across the province to meet with Queen Elizabeth II and the Duke of Edinburgh when they arrive in Toronto on October 9. ment over the 50 years of Her Majesty's reign will take place at Exhibition Place.

Pink Ribbon days will hit the Highlands this October as the crusade against Breast Cancer heats up during the national Kiss Goodbye to Breast Cancer Crusade. This year, trying on a pair of French Dressing Jeanswear at Country Pickin's in Haliburton will make a difference in the quest to raise money for cancer research. You can support breast cancer awareness by trying on a pair of French Dressing jeans in October and the jeans company will donate $1 to the pink ribbon campaign. For more information on the Avon Canada endeavour, call them at 1-800-265-AVON or visit the website at www.avon.ca.

A post-secondary education is one of the most important – and expensive – investments a young person can make. To find out what scholarships are available to help pay for some of those costs, students in Grades 11, 12 and OAC and their parents are invited to an information night at the Northern Lights Pavilion on Tues., Oct. 8 from 8 to 9 p.m. The guest speaker is Michael Howell, author of the Canadian series, Winning Scholarships.

Ten years ago, Andrew Bourgeois desperately needed a new kidney, and thanks to the transplant program, he got one. To celebrate the special anniversary of this new lease on life, Andrew's family rented a limousine so he could take all his favourite women and some of his friends to dinner at The Peppe Mill restaurant. Andrew, who has Down's Syndrome and is a Grade 10 student at Haliburton Highlands Secondary School, is shown here all dressed up and ready to go out for a night on the town.

Russian immigrant most at home in the forest

SHERYL LOUCKS

Staff Reporter

Dmitri Romanov may be the only person in Haliburton truly anxious to see snow again and the more the better for this Siberian-born new Canadian immigrant.

Romanov, a biologist, says he sees more deer and wildlife here daily than he used to see in a month in the forests where he used to work, about 400 km from St. Petersburg.

"I like it here very much. Lakes full of fish and forests full of game. Can't say same for ours," he commented, in English that is remarkably good after only 14 months of studying it.

Economic, environmental and political conditions became too difficult in Russia so Romanov chose to emigrate in order to find a better home for his son and wife.

Economically, things were getting worse. He watched the ruble fall 400 per cent in just three months and many, including himself, lost much in the crash.

Working wages were equally hard hit. In Russia, he says, a conservation officer makes only $40 to $50 a month and many do not work properly because they have to find ways to feed their families. He says there are many racketeers and poachers.

In his old job, he was a guide who had to find animals for others to hunt.

"I see deer almost every day (in Haliburton). In Russia you were looking for a week to find moose to be killed. And so painful to kill last moose," he says.

The job was heart-breaking but he could not find other work. He met his wife in Siberia at university but she was Latvian and had to return there. Romanov could live in Latvia but not work there because he was a Russian citizen. He spent 10 years working in Russia to support his family but only saw them for short, infrequent stretches of time, two weeks here, a week there.

Five years ago he decided they would emigrate. He did not want to go to a country like Australia with a hot climate and considered Canada because it had a similar climate to what he is used to. In Finland he met Canadians who were proud of their country and showed him pictures of the Yukon and Northern Alberta. British friends also told him about Canada.

"Finland is like Ontario but Canada is better than Finland so I come here," he says.

When he went to the Canadian embassy they told him his 14 years of experience as a wildlife biologist would be in his favour. There is a list of professions Canada is looking for in its immigrants and biologists are on it. Still it was a two-year process before he and his family were approved.

He had to pass an International English Language Test and studied for months from dictionaries and books. The result is that he says he can read English better than he can speak it, making a 90-minute interview with an immigration officer one of the toughest parts of the immigration process.

"English is very hard to learn. In Russia words sound how they are spelled; not in English," he lamented.

Yet he succeeded in scoring high on Canada's language test as well and his family came to Toronto in January of this year. His 16-year-old son used to learn English in school so Romanov says his English is best while his wife is still learning.

"My son studied in Toronto and got more than 85 per cent (in high school). He wants to go to university - he's pretty serious boy. I'm proud of him," says Romanov.

He went looking for an environmental program to take to learn how things are done in Canada and discovered the eco-tourism program at Haliburton's Sir Sandford Fleming College campus. Romanov says he also needs to learn how to use computers which he is not very familiar with.

So far he has been impressed with the program and his instructors.

"Al MacPherson is such a nice guy. So alive. So kind. He always wants to improve the program, improve eco-tourism in Ontario," he says, praising the program's coordinator.

Romanov is also volunteering with the local fish hatchery because he says it is a good experience and finds the people who started it doing "noble work to help trout."

The family arrived in August and he says they were relieved to find things far more peaceful and calm here. But he was even more relieved to see the exodus of tourists and cottagers so he can sometimes fish alone on Lake Kashagawigamog where they now live.

Accustomed to the silences and solitude of a climate known to have -60° weather, he still finds even Algonquin Park too crowded with people during a canoe trip with his classmates at the beginning of September. He once spent a year with only his dogs for company while working in Siberia.

He says that when he is in towns he likes to be with friends and is enjoying the people he is meeting here but when he is in the wilderness he wants to be alone. His ambition upon graduation is to find a job, preferably in the far north, such as the Yukon.

In the meantime, he joked that when he is feeling homesick he finds vodka to be the best cure.

stay overnight at a hotel; nor could they afford to eat.

As a result, Harrison told Moes "I'm extremely delighted to know something like this is going on. I'll do everything in my power to help."

Moes said that 20 years ago, her parents went bankrupt in the months following the birth of their son, who eventually had a heart transplant. Although her grandparents lived nearby and were able to take care of the five other children while her parents were at Sick Kids, time spent in Toronto was time not spent at work and the family had to eventually sell off everything to make ends meet.

Today, she's dropped everything else in her life to make sure the campaign reaches its $1.2-million goal in three years.

Dysart Deputy-reeve Bill Davis said that, when he was an ambulance paramedic, it wasn't uncommon for him and his fellow paramedics to give families a few dollars to help tide them over. As to the campaign, "It's nice to know there's someone out there to help."

Highlands East Deputy-reeve Chick Viner said that a few years ago he and his wife had to fly to Calgary three times to be with their son, who was ill and eventually died. He knows the strain placed on parents, and told Moes, "I'll do everything I can to help."

Here are some of the things the campaign will help to pay for, based on usual expenses incurred while a child is at Sick Kids. The fund is for all families in this region, including Haliburton County. So far, four families from the Highlands have been helped.

- $20 per day there and back for transportation
- $18 a day for food
- $9 a day for parking
- long distance calls home
- an average of $20 per day per other child in the family who requires daycare

• and varying costs for accommodation: $35 per night for a single room at the Residence College Hotel (special rate); $20 per night at Ronald McDonald House when available (there were eight people on the waiting list); or $99 per night at Hotel Chelsea/Toronto Colony.

To contribute to the campaign, send cheques to the Community Health Services Foundation, 311 George Street North, Box 814, Peterborough, K9J 7A2 or phone 705-743-6765.

Fenelon teacher to make bid for provincial Liberals

SHERYL LOUCKS

Staff Reporter

Energized by what he sees as the political needs of the province, Richard Christie wants to put his money where his ideals are and run in the next provincial election for the Liberal party.

The 42-year-old biology teacher at Fenelon Falls Secondary School has been politically active most of his life. He is currently a member of the federal Liberal Party executive and was the communications chair on the committee to elect John O'Reilly federally in 2000.

He says that if elected, the party should concentrate on what it can achieve quickly such as getting rid of the cost increases to seniors in long-term care facilities. Then he would like to see the party move forward with the clean air platform it has recently developed.

"Clean air is not just a moral issue. We spend over a billion dollars in health care related to air quality pollution," says Christie. "The Ministry of the Environment has been gutted. That's only good for the bottled water companies because people are too afraid to drink their water - that's unacceptable."

Since both Christie and his wife are teachers and he has played an active role in the Ontario Secondary School Teachers Federation, education issues are critically important to him.

"The funding formula is a mess. It's based on a 1997 salary base; it's five years out of date. We've seen the cancellation of special education programs and the disadvantage of kids," says Christie.

Aside from a summer spent as a camp counsellor on Soyer's Lake, Christie says he has never lived in Haliburton but loves it here. He is planning on coming up to do a public meeting some time in December.

The Liberals have yet to choose their candidate.

From Africa to The Echo

The Haliburton Rotary Club played host to four visitors from Africa last week who are spending a month in the region on a Group Study exchange. During their two-day stay in the Highlands the visitors were hosted in local Rotarians' homes and visited attractions, schools and businesses. Here, Echo publisher Len Pizze, one of the hosts, gives the group an overview of how The Echo and The Times are produced on computers. From left are: Mary Nagganda, a teacher from Uganda; local Rotarian Brian Menton, who led a similar exchange to South Korea in the spring; Lutfunisa Salyani, a teacher from Kenya; Josephine Kevugo, a nurse from Tanzania; and George Kasabante, team leader and a quantity surveyor from Uganda.

Trent-Severn update

The Haliburton Lakes declined to 47.9% on Monday, September 23. This was 2% lower than the 27-year average for that date and the decline rate was near the normal of 3.5% per week.

The flow has been reduced as the Kawarthas are holding well. Only a little rain was received but cooler temperatures may be beginning to reduce losses.

The Kawarthas are nearly steady in their navigation ranges and the Otonabee flow remains near its minimum.

Life and loss

NEWSPAPERS MAY BE CHRONICLERS of a community's life but they also have a life of their own. Friendships are made within the office and continue long past the time when some of those friends leave for other jobs, other careers, other lives. There are times of joy, and times of sadness, just like there are in the world beyond our doors.

In the past few weeks, we've experienced both happiness and loss. At the end of summer, Janet Hurley and Andrew Meeson dropped by with their new baby daughter, their second child. Janet and Andrew met at

The Echo, where they were both reporters, so we have a special interest in their children. (Janet now works for The Toronto Star and Andrew's a speechwriter.)

echo
editorial

— martha perkins

Last week we got an e-mailed photo of baby Claire, the new daughter of Wendy Bird, a former reporter who ended up moving back home to Sudbury when her mother got cancer for the second time. (There was a happy ending to that story, too; Wendy's mother made a complete recovery and Wendy met her husband. Claire is their second child.)

Yesterday, the e-mail was from Jodi (Lindbeck) Springett, the Australian who worked here for six months. She met her husband in England but they now live in Canberra, where Jody is excitedly counting the minutes to the birth of their first child.

So much life, so much joy.

But there is also so much sadness. A year ago, we found out that Nancy Kuzmich, who was here around the same time as Janet, was diagnosed with brain cancer. She was just about to turn 40. Many people will remember her and her husband Brian, who was greenskeeper and golf course manager at the PineStone.

With heavy hearts, we learned that Nancy died in her sleep on Friday, at home with Brian and their two children.

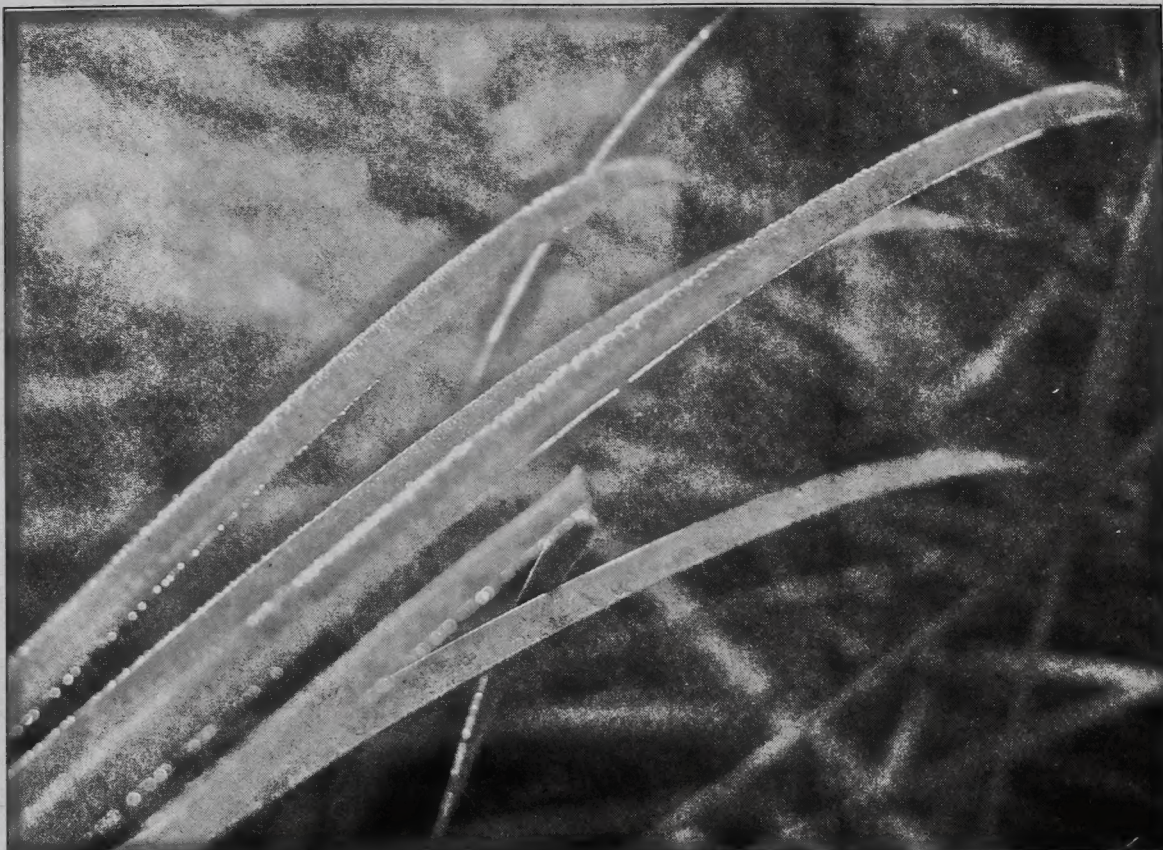

Nancy was one of those people who literally bubbled with enthusiasm. (Who else would suggest that we play Nude Twister at the staff Christmas party?) She and Janet would spend lay-out Mondays re-living the skits of the previous weekend's Saturday Night Live, giggling as if they were hearing the jokes for the first time.

More than that, Nancy had a huge heart. A woman who came to have a deep faith as a young adult, she seemed to be on a quest to give some of her happiness to others. She wanted you to smile and laugh, and every time she succeeded it was like a gift.

Nancy's funeral was Monday, the one day of the week when it is impossible for us to escape the deadlines of putting out The Echo. We weren't able to make it to Dundas for the funeral, but our thoughts and prayers were there for her and her family. Her death is such an incredibly huge loss.

When someone so young, so vibrant dies, it certainly makes everyone else count their blessings. Why Nancy? Why not me? None of us chooses to be that person who has to cope with a devastating illness; none of us can believe that there is some special rule which prevents us from being the one who gets the horrible news.

As always, when someone dies you think of their legacy. Nancy's legacy was to love and laugh, and how important these two things are in all of our lives. She'll always be that little voice in our head telling us to lighten up, to not take everything so seriously. Today, those who are left certainly are counting their blessings. The problems of life don't seem as big, somehow.

Cheap shots

THERE COMES A TIME OR TWO in every bird hunter's life where he might actually witness someone hit a bird. It's important to note that when I say hit, I mean with shotgun pellets rather than the stock of the gun although most wing shooters I know say I would have a better chance of success with the latter.

Naturally, momentous occasions such as these call for a sincere compliment, high praise and perhaps even a cycle of stories rivaling that of the Norse God Sagas. Of course, it's an entirely different matter if someone other than me hits the bird.

Say, for instance, you are sharing a duck blind with a hunting buddy and a fortuitous gust of wind happens to reroute his shot pattern into the same time-space continuum that the world's unluckiest mallard duck just entered into. What do you do?

Those under the mistaken impression that bird hunting is a gentleman's sport would assume that you congratulate your partner on a shot well made. Nothing, however, could be further from the truth.

Congratulations and insincere back patting only serves to reinforce your buddy's belief that skill and marksmanship were actually involved. This is wantonly cruel; for soon enough he or she might expect to hit birds on every shot that follows and would be constantly let down on any outing that lacked the right combination of fortuitous winds and unlucky birds.

No, a far more prudent course of action would be to ignore the downed bird and continue drinking coffee and sharing a sandwich with the disbelieving retriever who just brought it in. In short, act as if the whole miraculous incident never occurred.

It goes without saying that the hunter who downed the bird will let this pass as easily as a three pound kidney stone. Fishing for accolades, he'll say subtle things like, "Now you have to admit that was a great shot!"

But even though he did take the time to remark how skillfully you decapitated the top of a nearby swamp willow as the duck passed, a smart hunter will resist the temptation to return any such compliments.

Instead, a lengthy dissertation on the joys of pruning the wetlands should be utilized to take his mind off of any pie-in-the-sky dreams that he might one day hit another duck.

"But you were aiming at the same duck I downed!" he'll say with more than a hint of exasperation.

All the more reason to be appreciative of the shot that I actually made, I'd point out. Sooner or later, after all, the odds are that anyone who has fired enough shells might actually put a pellet or two into their intended target. And those odds increase exponentially with the amount of eyes left open at the instant of aiming. Yet, these occasional successes only prove that the gunner lacks a consistent approach to marksmanship. Worse still, this mistake means that they'll actually have to pluck and clean birds.

Furthermore, it lays waste to all claims about being a true conservationist. After all, a true conservationist is concerned not just with the birds but also with habitat creation and improvement, hence my frequent need to trim swamp willows instead of hapless waterfowl.

Yes, the mere fact that a partner killed a duck elevates the unsuccessful hunter to moral high ground. This is so self-evident that experienced bird hunters will wonder why I am committing it to print. And, contrary to popular belief, it has nothing to do with the fact that, compared to my waterfowling colleagues, my moral high ground is so high as to be jokingly referred to as Steve's Mountain.

Actually, I'm hoping to rebuild our economy by spending untold dollars on obviously faulty ammunition. That's because unlike those stingy marksmen that I hunt with, I never take cheap shots.

Helping out

YOU KNOW, YOU SHOULDN'T DO THAT yet." Steve turned his head. Was that voice addressed to him? Sure enough, a fellow was leaning out the window of a rusted old truck, being as helpful as can be.

"Beg your pardon?" inquired Steve, continuing to reach for the oil stick under his car's hood.

"The oil," said the man. "You should wait a few minutes for the oil to settle after driving on account it bubbles up." Steve looked at him again and then recognized the face as one from years ago - about fifteen years. The other didn't appear to recognize Steve and while he was trying to decide whether to start that "You're so and so, aren't you?" conversation, the man was hopping out of his truck. So Steve just continued what he was doing.

He was really looking forward to this Sunday. He and Laura, his daughter, were headed over to Muskoka for a day of studio visiting and lunch in a restaurant. They didn't get to spend that much time together any more, what with Laura working shifts and Steve now living at the far end of the county. So they made a point of planning time together every so often, like today. Laura wanted to look at paintings and Steve was interested in outdoor sculpture.

But it seemed to be taking forever to get on the road. Steve had slept in, Laura had to make arrangements for the puppy; now they needed gas and maybe oil and there was a lineup at the pumps. Laura went into the station to get them both coffees while Steve looked at the oil stick. It was down a litre. He called to Laura to bring out some 10W30 but she didn't hear so he went inside himself. There was the helpful man, still talking to the cashier while people shifted impatiently behind him. He managed a nod at Steve without missing a word to the cashier.

To Steve's surprise, Tim (Steve now recalled his name) followed him out and over to his car. "You gotta be careful not to put oil in a hot engine," Tim cautioned, reaching over to unscrew the lid without Steve asking. "If your engine's hot, you blow something." As he made the last statement, he waved his arm to demonstrate the blow and the lid went flying. It landed on its edge and rolled under Steve's car. Laura sat in the passenger's seat, sipping coffee and watching.

"Darn those things," Tim laughed a bit awkwardly. "They can be harder to hold onto than a woman." Steve made no comment. Laura groaned and rolled her eyes. "No offense," he added hastily. Since Steve was dressed for studio touring, not crawling under his car, Tim indicated he'd retrieve the lid. He had to get right under the car. "You know you may have trouble under here," he commented with some alarm.

"Really?" said Steve, wishing this would all end so he could be on his way. "Well I'll have my mechanic check it out, whatever it is." He hoped this would end the conversation before it went any further. Tim was now brushing at his clothes, as though anything he might have picked up under the car would be noticeable on his pants. Hardly likely, thought Steve. He remembered Tim as one of those people who were not overly fond of cleanliness, be it of clothes, skin or houses. It was a trait that tended to run in Tim's family.

"Your emergency brake cable looks pretty corroded. I wouldn't go parking on any mountains today if I were you," Tim stated brightly, grinning at his own humour. There were few teeth in his mouth but the smile was open and friendly. Steve immediately felt guilty for his own silent displeasure. Tim was just trying to help, to feel useful, even if there was no real need. If necessary, he would try to create a need in order to keep this bit of a chat going.

But Steve wanted to be on his way. So, thrusting out his hand to shake Tim's own grimy one, he said "You don't remember me, Tim, but I'm Steve who used to go out with your second cousin Carol a ways back. Thanks for your help." And before Tim could recover from his surprise, Steve was back in his car and pulling the door shut. He started the engine and Tim had to move or be run over so he moved. Steve pulled away from the station, giving Tim a farewell wave.

"Did you really know that guy?" Laura asked. Steve told Laura how he had come to meet Tim and some of his family years ago, shortly after Laura's mother had died.

"Why did he act that way?" she wanted to know. "We didn't need his help."

"Maybe he needed ours, at least today," he replied. "Maybe feeling helpful gets him through life."

Benefits versus losses

To the Editor:

There have been a number of pieces in your paper recently about services which we all as a community rely on.

The public library is an invaluable asset with its satellite branches, inter-library loans and CAP internet terminals. These give access to information, education and entertainment resources which would be unavailable otherwise to many.

Your newspaper itself is an incomparable resource for community news and deserves all the awards you can heap on your mantel.

These are the things that set the tone for a community.

There have been a number of feature articles on the supposed "benefits" liquor sales in the local grocery stores have brought to the community, while simultaneously there have been reports of more and more serious emergency calls and accidents in the region. When I was in the U.S., it grieved me to see bars on the doors and windows of "Mom and Pop" convenience stores, trying to protect their cache of alcohol, and it was a relief to consider that this was not the case in Canada; but, that is not true any more, and we are all the poorer for it.

The asphalt plant is another example of presumed profit of a few versus the certain incalculable loss to the community as a whole, if such unwarranted development is permitted to proceed. (It reminds one of "Sharkey's" plans for the Hobbits' home in Professor Tolkien's tome The Lord of the Rings.)

In your last issue you ran a feature article about the Home Support program: a service which many in the community rely on, and which we all hope will be there when we need it. Unfortunately, when someone dear to me with a disability was affected by the government "claw-backs and cutbacks" alluded to in another letter to the editor last month, they were told that the Home Support program is not a charity, and that regardless of their dietary restrictions they should go to the food bank, and to shop at the dump.

Some may argue that the tone of the province is set by Queen's Park, which seems intent on turning even the Highlands and forests into blacktop and blackhearts, no matter the cost, if we as a community will but join the cacophony of this cruel chorus. May the next measure bring a more harmonious melody to the Highlands. Of course, it's up to the chorus whether to join the chorale.

Jasmine S. Jones,
Lincoln, Ont.

Who's the problem in the Highlands?

To the Editor:

Get rid of the geese, problem bears, dumped kittens: Sept 17th's issue of The Echo was quite thought-provoking.

It seems when something becomes an inconvenience to us then that is when it becomes a problem. Perhaps some humans are the problem!

Fledgling Hawks team earns first win

Sweet victory for basketball program in second year

DARREN LUM

Staff Reporter

The first win of the season for the junior women's basketball team is sweet but for returning players Meghan Shaw, Danielle Clements, Brandi Schell, and Laura Riley, the first win is even sweeter.

"For those girls [the win] was sweet," coach Roland Zilla said. After an entire season of losses and disappointment, Zilla adds, "They endured it. Without them [enduring] we wouldn't even have had a season".

Last season it wasn't uncommon for the Hawks to lose by 20 or more points, and keeping games close was victory enough.

In a game that saw the home side fall behind at the half by six points to St. Thomas Aquinas it looked sadly reminiscent of last year's winless season. With a strong aggressive defence and playing the entire 16 player roster, the Hawks erased that memory. They pushed the St. Thomas team into exhaustion who relied mainly on their starting five.

With a minute left in the game and the score 29-29, Shaw stood at the charity stripe ready to take her two shots. With a hushed crowd on hand, she sank both shots and the crowd erupted knowing a win was at hand. The Hawks held off a last charge by St. Thomas Aquinas and preserved the win, 31-29.

The leading scorer was Michelle Neuman with 7 points.

When the buzzer rang it was a sound of victory rather than defeat. The women from last year's team shed tears of joy after suffering many losses last year. If this game is any indication this season will prove to be different for the women's program in only its second year. Their next scheduled home game is against Fenelon Falls on Oct. 10.

Meghan Shaw plays tight against a St. Thomas Aquinas player. Shaw earned 10 steals in the game and sank two foul shots to clinch the win. Hawks won 31-29.

NIKKI CAIRNS

HHSS Co-op student

This week at HHSS the students were very busy with all the extra curricular activities.

Congratulations to all the Terry Fox participants. They raised over $2,400 to help find cures for cancer. The top pledge earners were Joe Cox and Lesley Cox. The fastest runners were Romana Oleg, Amelia Ambridge, Mr. Klose and Miss Chester. Mr. Klose's class had the top pledgers and won a free pizza lunch.

On Friday September 20 the junior basketball team travelled to Gravenhurst, and played an outstanding game. Unfortunately they lost by one point. Michelle Neuman had 4 points, 5 rebounds, and 5 steals and assists; Laura Reilly had 4 points, 5 rebounds and 5 steals; Brandi Schell had 6 points; and Cassedy Zilla contributed 5 points.

The junior girls basketball team travelled to LCVI on September 24. Despite a 40-16 loss they still held their heads up high. Megan Shaw had 12 steals, and 10 points which led the team scores. She showed great defense and leadership for her team.

On September 25 the junior soccer team played another great game, holding first place LCVI to a one-goal lead for the duration of the game. Despite that, the juniors could not make it equal.

The senior boys soccer team played an amazing game against LCVI and ended the game with a 2-0 win. The forwards played strong and kept the ball in LCVI's end of the field for the most part of the game. Goal scorers were Mitsu Takao and Matt Flowers. The attitude of the team captain T.J. Wilkinson also played a great role in the win.

The girls varsity rugby team won their first home opener on Sept. 26 against Port Hope. The winning kick was made by Jenny Locke. Amazing plays were made by Noel Johnston, Mel Anderson, Keri Andrus, and Jill Louis.

The junior boys football team travelled to Adam Scott on Sept 26 and played a great game. With 20 seconds left in the game they tied the score and into two overtime halves, had to call the game due to the lack of light.

Wins for rugby and basketball season openers

The Junior girls basketball team came home with their first victory of the year. The girls played against St. Thomas and won 31-29. Julie Johnson had 6 points, 9 rebounds and 13 assists and steals; Meghan Shaw had 10 steals; and Michelle Neuman had 12 rebounds.

On Sept. 26 the senior girls field hockey team played at home against Crestwood and Adam Scott. In the first game against Adam Scott the girls won 1-0 with a goal by Kerri Matysek assisted by Cassie Kulas. The second game Crestwood won 3-2. Both goals for the Hawks were scored by Shyanne Watson assisted by Joanne Varty and Cassie Kulas.

Keep up the great work Red Hawks!

Senior Hawks earn split:

Right: Sarah Oakley draws the ball from the back line into the front of the Adam Scott net where Kerri Matysek is ready to strike. A last second tip in by Kerri Matysek sealed the victory for the senior Red Hawks, 1-0.

Bottom: Vanessa Eastmuire has her eye checked by teammate Cassie Kulas during stoppage of play against Adam Scott. Eastmuire left midway through the first half and missed the rest of the game as well as the second game against Crestwood when she was hit above the eye by an errant shot. Eastmuire is expected to return to the lineup next week for their next game.

Karate students earn colours for fall tourney

KAI SHIN KARATE CLUB

Special to the Echo

Twenty-one Haliburton karate students, aged five to 40, under the guidance of Sensei (Teacher) Mike Chapman, were put through their final test earlier this month in preparation for graduation to the next belt colour. The skill and ability of a student of karate is demonstrated by the belt colour they wear. A white belt indicates a new or beginning student, while yellow, orange, green, blue and brown identify students who have progressively more experience and greater skills.

White Sensei Chapman, YoDan (4th degree Black belt) directed the students through the 1-1/2 hour test, they were evaluated by Sensei Jim Baron, NiDan (2nd degree Black belt), from Toronto, two Kai-Shin North brown belts, Chris Dobbins and Diane Hutchings.

Each belt has a group of katas unique to that belt. A Kata is a series of moves performed in an ordered sequence, similar to compulsory moves in figure skating. As a student progresses, they are not only required to master the Katas unique to their belt colour but must also continue to hone and perfect the Katas from their previous belt colours. Each belt has at least two and sometime three katas, thus a student testing for a blue belt must accurately demonstrate their ability to do as many as 8 katas. In addition, students learn the art of self-defense and sparring (Kumite). Like the Katas, belt colour is an indication of an individual's proficiency. During the testing students are required to demonstrate their expertise in these areas. Finally, students are judged on their attitude and character as it relates to others, to the Doji (Karate Club) and to the sport of Karate.

Congratulations to the following on completion of the requirements for graduation: Brian McNeil, Jackie Grech, Doug Wallace, Kaila Grech, Karl Kadwell, Jason Hutchings, Val Muike, Caleb

Snow, Kyle Seabrooke, Cyril Darke, Tracy Dobbie and Jon Salvatore

In addition, five students stood the tests for their brown belt. A brown belt is the highest colour before attaining a black-belt. A brown belt holder earns the title of Sempai (number 1 boy/girl) and has reached the status of 1st Kyu. To qualify for a brown belt, a student must first complete the requirements of the lower belts (white, yellow, orange, green and blue). Since the brown belt is considered the most important before moving onto black belt, the testing is more rigorous and completed in three stages. Those students qualifying for a brown belt were tested in their home dojo, then travelled to Toronto where they were tested before a panel of black belt judges. Finally, they were required to submit a 500 word essay describing their background and what Karate means to them.

Gord Seabrooke of Lochlin led the blue belts through the preliminary testing for qualification of their brown belt designation. Drew Carey, Kevin Wendover, Alison King, and Christopher King joined Gord in this demanding test. As well as performing the katas and demonstrating their skills in self-defense, they were required to show the extent and breadth of their knowledge of individual karate strikes and blocks. Attitude, enthusiasm, leadership and their commitment to the sport were also factored in.

Sensei Monty Guest, Shian (6th degree Black belt) of Toronto's Hombu Dojo and the founder of the Kai Shin Karate Association, hosted the brown belt grading. Students from across Ontario joined the Haliburton group during the second phase of the testing. Sensei Guest congratulated the Haliburton Kai Shin students on the successful completion of the tests, "Earning your brown belt is a most important step in your karate journey. With it comes greater recognition but also greater responsibility. You will lead the way for others by teaching and demonstrating good sportsmanship."

"The test was physically, mentally and emotionally draining," commented Drew Carey, "It was very satisfying to earn my brown belt and I look forward to helping others achieve their karate goals."

Karate is an excellent way to maintain good physical fitness, develop personal confidence and learn about your inner strengths. Sensei Mike invites anyone interested in learning more about Karate to come to the club and watch a session or even better participate in a complimentary class. The club is open to all ages.

Haliburton prepared to host friendly karate tournament

KAI SHIN KARATE CLUB

Special to the Echo

There will be more than 200 participants from 21 communities in Ontario who will arrive in Haliburton the weekend of October 6th to compete in the first, of what is hoped to be an annual event, the Kai Shin North Karate Shiai.

A Shiai is a friendly tournament between Karate clubs. Shiai's are a way to measure the strength and progress of a Karate Club. Competitors, ranging in age from 5 to 40+, will compete in Kata (forms) and Kumite (sparring) events. Kata competitions involve the participants completing prescribed Karate moves in an ordered sequence, similar to compulsory moves in figure skating. Kumite is control sparring (no contact) between competitors. A centre judge and four corner judges will be watching for moves that would result in a strike to the opposition. A point is awarded for a clean strike and two points are required to win a match. Participants will be divided according to their belt colour and age. The belt colour indicates the participants level of ability and although white, yellow and orange belts may compete in the same category, judges take into account the skill level of each participant as demonstrated by their belt colour.

"Haliburton is the perfect setting of an event such as this," enthused Sensei Mike Chapman of the Kai Shin North Karate Club. "Many of the visiting competitors have never been to Haliburton so it is an opportunity to show off our community. We're counting on spectacular fall colours and the usual friendly welcome of the town to make this an event that people will want to come back to each year."

Kai Shin North promises to field a strong team with representatives in every age and belt category. The tournament will be held at the Royal Canadian legion in Haliburton with the first events scheduled to begin on Sunday, October 6 at 11:30 a.m. Sensei Mike invites the public to attend and cheer on local competitors. A portion of all proceeds will be donated to the Haliburton Family Services.

Ready for friendly battle:

The Kai Shin Karate club is all set to welcome martial artists.

Night of Fifties fun raises money for health services

A gala dinner, dance and auction with lots of "Fifties fun" will be held on Saturday, October 5th at the Wigamog Inn Resort.

Join the Haliburton Highlands Health Services Foundation at 6 p.m. in your fifties or formal dress. Your hosts for the evening are the great and very funny morning show team from the "Moose 97.7" fm radio station - Wendy Gray and Tim Casey.

Dancing to "The Lincolnares", a five-member Fifties rock and roll band will begin early and promises to keep you hopping!

There will be lots of "Fifties Fun" as you try to guess "Who Is Who In The Fifties". There will be pictures of these well known community people and lots of memorabilia to take you back and test your memory. You can even win money if you guess correctly!

Varty's Jewellery and Gifts have very generously donated a 1/4 carat diamond and by purchasing a glass of champagne, some lucky person will find the real one in the bottom of the glass. Mike and Kim Varty will be on hand to verify which glass contains the real diamond! Only they will know!

There will be live and silent auction items to tempt you, fabulous food, prizes and every couple will go home with a little something, not to mention the memories of a fun time while supporting your health care facilities.

So, To Rock Around The Clock, purchase your tickets to the "Fifties Fall Fantasy" by contacting the HHHS Foundation at 457-1580.

Do you remember this sign? Our readers do

To the Editor:

Re: Pic of the Past, September 24.

I know where the "Welcome to Haliburton sign" with the moose was located! It was on the right side of Highway 35 heading north, at the top of the hill as one entered Haliburton County - just north of Norland.

It is from the '50s, as that's when I started cottaging here with my parents on Beech Lake. It was always a welcome sign that we were getting close (are we there yet?), although the road in those days had many more twists and turns than today, and I usually arrived queasy and more than happy to get out of the car.

Thanks for the memories!

Janet O'Neil
Eagle Lake

Editor's note: Janet O'Neil's not the only one with a good memory.

We got a call from Olga Black, who said that her husband, Harold, was the reeve of Dysart et al when the signs were erected at the entry points to the Highlands. She says that was around 1952.

Paul Metcalfe of Haliburton Lake also has happy memories of the sign. "I saw it every Friday night and cried every Sunday night when we had to leave. We'd all have a laugh of joy when we saw the moose. The first time I was allowed to drive by myself to the cottage, it was such a thrill to see the moose." Dennis Dunn says that along with the moose sign, there was also one with bears.

Bill Valentine says a man from Norland originally painted the sign; Bob Stinson's uncle, Art Stinson, repainted it at the family cottage.

ENVIRONMENT

Feature and

Martha Perkins

Pausing after dragging out two hemlock trees from the forest, skidder operator Russell Sisson and Haliburton Forest's owner and manager, Peter Schleifenbaum, talk about the recent logging. Schleifenbaum, below, recently won silver in the Inaugural Canadian Environmental Awards.

The distant whine of the skidder becomes a thundering roar as Russell Sisson drags two large hemlock trees out of the forest.

The skidder is a massive beast, breathing black smoke into the air as it labours with its load. A large, loamy scar traces its path from forest to road, the churned earth camouflaged only slightly by the small trees it has crumpled in its wake.

Watching over this scene is Peter Schleifenbaum, the owner and manager of Haliburton Forest.

The sights and sounds of logging are not pretty but Schleifenbaum makes no apologies.

"A storm is even uglier," he says. "Nature isn't pretty. In many ways, we're just mimicking nature."

A hard-hearted landowner who sees the forest simply as a place to plunder for profit?

A few minutes after watching Sisson drag the logs out of the Forest, Schleifenbaum gets a call on his Jeep's radio. It's Dave Bishop, calling in from Base Camp.

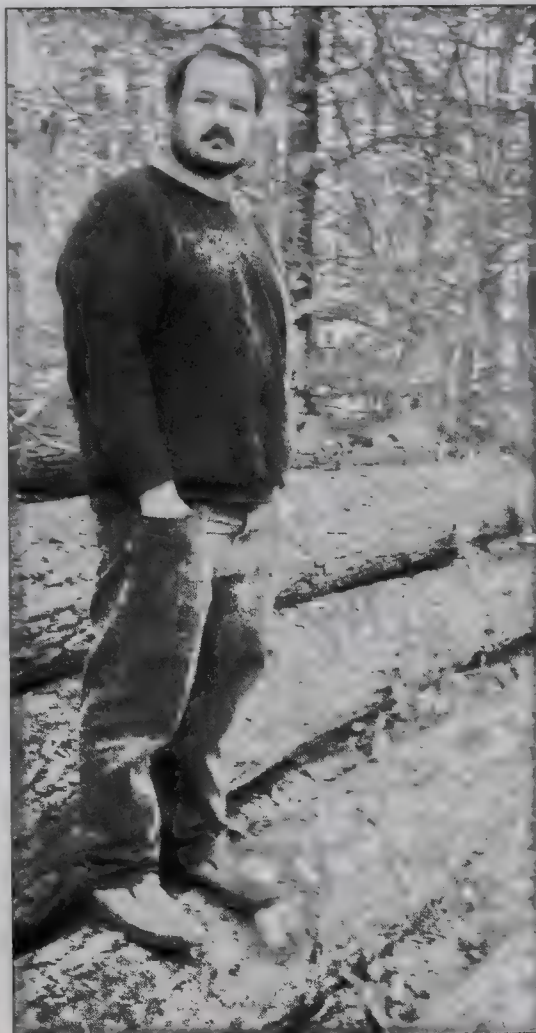

"Congratulations," Bishop tells Schleifenbaum. "You won silver."

The silver is Schleifenbaum's ranking in the inaugural Canadian Environmental Awards. The night before, at a gala dinner in Hull, Québec, hosted by Gillian Deacon of the Discovery Channel and attended by federal Environment Minister David Anderson, the winners were announced. Schleifenbaum had been one of 29 Canadians – four in the Lands and Forests category – who had been nominated. Over the past few months, people had voted for their favourites on Canadian Geographic's website, but Schleifenbaum had been unable to be present when their choices for the top two awards were announced because he was too busy back at the 60,000-hectare property near Kennisis Lake.

He hadn't bothered to check the website to see if he was a winner, either, so it was up to Bishop to share the good news. (The gold medal winner was the Citizens Stewardship Coalition of Port Alberni, British Columbia.

They successfully fought against B.C. Hydro's plan to build a $300 million gas-fired generating plant alongside the town's largest shopping mall.)

A person who logs winning an environmental award? To some people, it's an unwelcome partnership of words, but to Schleifenbaum, cutting down trees as a way of enhancing nature is perfectly natural.

"These trees," he says, "are the only renewable resource we have on this earth. We can take them and still have forests."

You can even have better forests as a result of logging – or at least, logging that's done properly.

One hundred years ago, the property now known as Haliburton Forest was not logged well. Only the good trees were taken, leaving the bad to propagate the forest and postponing other logging opportunities for decades. Loggers were only interested in the here and now and didn't care what trees they damaged in the process.

Look at that beech tree, Schleifenbaum says, pointing to a large tree farther down the road. It's scarred and unhealthy, of little value to the forest or a landowner who wants to harvest it.

Now look at this section of forest which was logged last year. The marks of the skidder have by and large disappeared, covered by saplings and brush. Every so often, there's a small opening in the forest, space left by the cut tree. This allows more light to fall on the other trees, more nutrients from the soil to feed them. Fifteen years from now, the skidders can return to harvest a few more trees, and 15 years after that....

"To me, it's forest management," says Schleifenbaum, who has a PhD in forestry. "It's the use of wood fibre. So I don't feel badly about [logging] it at all. It means that there's more space in there for the other trees to grow. The resilience in a forest is amazing."

Others obviously agree with Schleifenbaum's forestry methods. As outlined on the awards' website, "In 1998, Haliburton Forest was the first Canadian forest 'certified' by the international Forest Stewardship Council for its environmentally and socially beneficial practices. This status affirms Schleifenbaum's forestry methods, which have rehabilitated land considered an industry write-off when he assumed its management 12 years ago to a level of ecological complexity predating commercial logging in the 1860s.

"Forestry is an art," he says. "We constantly look at the relationships among the ecosystem's elements. Our aim is to have a sustainable yield into perpetuity."

Schleifenbaum knows there are some who disagree with logging what to them is a huge, valuable nature reserve, best left untouched by human hands. "Everyone has a different perspective," he says. "To some people, what you just saw [when Sisson's skidder dragged the trees out of the forest] was unacceptable."

Even though he believes fiercely in sustainable forestry, has dedicated parts of the Forest to research and has left large tracts of Haliburton Forest untouched, Schleifenbaum doesn't call himself an environmentalist.

"An environmentalist to me is someone who's only looking at the environment, ignoring the practical aspects of

It's not a pretty sight when a huge skidder drags logs out of the forest. But as the tornado which ripped through Haliburton Forest several years ago attests, Nature can do an ugly job when she rips up a tree, too. A year from now, however, the forest will be healthier and you'll hardly notice the signs that logging has taken place.

life, especially economics. You have to find the balance."

Haliburton Forest needs money in order to sustain itself. A forest that just sits there still has costs, such as taxes and staff. Even if he didn't believe that logging can be good for a forest, Schleifenbaum would still look to the harvesting of trees as a way to pay those bills.

That doesn't prevent him from questioning and reviewing Haliburton Forest's practices. Last year, it greatly reduced the number of snowmobiles using its trails. The impact from hundreds of snowmobiles every weekend in the winter on the land and Forest's human resources was just too severe, and Schleifenbaum says putting limits on the number of trail users was one of their best decisions.

He's also introduced horse logging in some areas of the forest, where damage done by skidders would take decades to recover. Horses may not be as efficient as a skidder, but they don't do a fraction of the damage to a forest floor, especially in wet areas. They're also a lot less expensive.

Every use of the forest leaves an impact, from the mountain bikers to the 300 trailers scattered throughout the property to the people who make their way to the canopy tour; it's a matter of deciding how much of an impact it can sustain.

Sometimes, Schleifenbaum says, people don't trust his commitment to the future and to the environment because he is a private landowner and businessman.

"We're looking at the long-term future but that's hard to get across to the public," he says. "As a private property, people don't believe you. But ownership doesn't have anything to do with management. I've seen a lot of public management that's really bad."

So, awards or not, he and his staff will continue to work away at Haliburton Forest, doing what they think is best for the land and its future. That future will include a variety of uses, including recreation, tourism, education, hunting and logging and it's Schleifenbaum's job to find the balance, both for today and tomorrow.

In its 4th year the Fall Colours Jamboree square dancing event took over the Haliburton Highlands Secondary School on Saturday, Sept. 21. Hosted by the Haliburton Highlands Twirlers, the event drew more than 300 dancers who came from all over the province such as St. Thomas, Ottawa and Elliot Lake. Even American dancers, from Michigan and Kansas, made the trip to join their Canadian friends. There were 39 dancing clubs represented at the event. Using the athletic facility and the cafeteria, dancers ranged in category from Mainstream, Plus to Advanced 1 and performed such sequences as the 'round dance'. Callers such as Garth Calvert (pictured), and top Ontario caller, Tim Crawford, provided directions for the afternoon and evening.

A call came recently from Carolyn Barnes, a Grade 6 student at the Wilberforce school with news that she and Leah Grant are helping to raise funds for some much needed playground equipment for their school.

A giant "White Elephant" Craft and Bake School is planned for Saturday, November 16. They have booked the Lloyd Watson Centre. (There is no gym/auditorium at the school at which to hold the sale.) They need volunteers to make their sale a success. If you can offer time, ideas, and/or items for sale, please talk to Carolyn at 448-3579 or Leah at 448-1635. Let's find some treasures or bake a cake to help these young people with their playground project.

How often we put off little things. Time flies. Then it's too late. For years I have had good intentions to visit friends Pat and Anna Mary Malloy in Bancroft for tea and a good chat. Especially since retiring back home. Never got there. Did send Christmas cards. Did go to their 50th Anniversary party, never got to the new house for that visit. Pat died late last week at age 88.

They were my second family when I taught in Bancroft in the 1950s. Regular apartments were non-existent in those days. The old road was not one you would drive night and morning from Wilberforce. So for five and a half years the Malloy home was my second home. A private kitchen/living room, but on upstairs to bedrooms and bathroom just like one of the family. Aileen, Janet and Aletha came in turn to share. I stayed. How welcome I felt in that home. What memories. Sympathy is extended to Anna Mary and to the "kids" Ellen, Patsy, Claudine, Tommy, Ann and Anita and their families. And I really will come for tea - soon Anna Mary.

This Thursday evening October 3, is the Benefit evening for little 2-year-old Samantha Thomas and her family. There is a Pot Luck Dinner at 5:30 p.m. and John and Mary Barker's slide show of New Zealand at 7 p.m. and hopefully lots of generous participants. See posters around the village or call Jodi at 448-2290 for more information.

Joyce Bowman called to let you know that the Christmas Craft Sale is on November 2, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. There were just a few tables left for vendors at $12.00 Call Joyce at 448-2626.

Several Wilberforce residents thoroughly enjoyed the Best of Broadway concert at the Northern Lights Pavilion in Haliburton last Friday evening. With Melody McShane, pianist, and musical director, vocalists Fred Love, Guillermo Silva-

Martin and Elizabeth De Grazia on stage the hall was filled with all those great songs from so many favourite musicals. These talented musicians are part of the Toronto Operetta Theatre and have unbelievable resumes. Their involvement's and appearances would fill three of these columns. How fortunate to have them come to this area. Congratulations to the Convert Series volunteer committee for this concert and the whole series - and for 23 years of providing exceptional performances.

Next year (2003) marks the 30th anniversary of the Douglas C. Hatch (Ont. No. 624) of the Royal Canadian Legion. If anyone would like to contribute any old photographs, newspaper clippings or any other memorabilia, please call to make arrangements with Hilary Klapow at 448-2054. Hilary is putting together an historical account of the Wilberforce Legion and welcomes your assistance.

The Gentlemen of Song are on the road again after a summer break from performing. On Saturday September 28, they were well received at the Bandshell in Bancroft. It was part of September Fest and the crowd loved them.

The Loop Troupe will be presenting their play "From Five To Five-Thirty" at the Eastern Ontario Drama One-Act Play Festival in Cornwall on Nov. 9. Fitting all the set furnishings/props into one small trailer and a few cars is a challenge. We are trying to locate a table that folds up (not a card table), maybe a small gate leg one. Call Hilda 448-2018 with ideas or offers about a table.

Best wishes for a happy life together goes out to Barry Lewis and Annette Cowen. They were married on Saturday, September 28, in Wilberforce in a beautifully decorated Lloyd Watson Centre. Reception, dinner and dance which followed were attended by many family members and friends.

Former Highlander joins Katimavik for a seven-month volunteer adventure

Volunteer work can provide numerous rewards, including the development of career related skills and a sense of civic responsibility. Many youth who are searching for their place in life turn to youth volunteer programs, because they believe that finding the right program to fit their interests has big returns.

That's why Emily Newell, who grew up in Haliburton, has chosen to participate in Katimavik, Canada's leading national youth service learning program.

Emily will obtain valuable experience by working as a volunteer and will receive training in five strategic areas: leadership, second language, environment, cultural discovery, and healthy living.

She will live for seven months with 10 other participants from across Canada, beginning the Katimavik program on September 25th in St-Pascal, Québec, then moving on to Bridgewater, Nova Scotia, and finally to Bonnyville, Alberta.

Emily's Katimavik experience will be based on service learning, a socio-educational program based on professional and personal development through volunteer work on community projects. Eighty-seven per cent of participants rating their leadership skills as "good" to "very good", compared with 44% before the program.

For many past participants, it's an experience that has increased their self-esteem and helped them find their future direction.

Anyone between the ages of 17 and 21 who would like to register for the 2003-2004 program should visit www.katimavik.org or call toll-free 1 888 525-1503.

As well, if you are one of the over 22,000 former participants and employees who have taken part in Katimavik and would like to find out more about the Alumni Association and the 25th anniversary celebrations are also invited to visit the web site or call the toll-free number.

Double cohorts told of government's graduation plans

NIKKI CAIRNS

HHSS Co-op student

Dave Weldon came to HHSS last Tuesday to give as much information as he could to graduating students who are in the double cohort.

There is an abundant number of students graduating this year.

Students now in Grade 12 and OAC are part of what will be the single largest increase in post-secondary enrolment in a generation. In 1997, the province began on a five-year plan to phase out OAC, or the fifth year of high school.

Weldon, who's with the Ministry of Training, Colleges and Universities, came to the school to outline the province's plan to make sure that every willing and qualified student would continue to have a place in a post secondary education program this September. Working together with colleges and universities, they built a plan to develop a high quality education system that has the ability to match the projected enrollment numbers.

The double cohort students are only a part of the increased demand for further education. Other factors include the demographic growth in the 18- to 24-year-old age group and the need for students of all ages to obtain new skills or upgrade existing skills as the changing nature of the workplace changes. The combination of all these factors will lead to a significant growth in colleges and universities throughout Ontario. The enrollment already is approximately 434,000 students.

To help with these escalated student numbers, the provincial government has increased support for the post secondary educational system. The universities support will increase by $75-million, rising an additional $368 million by the 2003-04 school year.

This budget also included investments in research and innovation to ensure success in a knowledge-based economy. The research and development fund saw an increase of $250-million. The innovation trust fund, which helps Ontario universities and colleges develop the infrastructure needed for research and technology development, was enhanced by $300-million dollars and an additional $2-million per year was set aside for the $30-million annual Ontario research performance fund, with an additional $11-million in ongoing grants to help implement the access to programs.

The government's plan to prepare for the double cohort is to create new student spaces in post secondary institutions, work with university and college admissions to ensure that students are treated fairly in the admissions process, make sure that current and future spending is provided to students with quality learning programs, give students support and help parents and students plan better for the cost of post secondary education, plus to make sure students have all the information needed to make good choices to achieve goals.

For students who plan to enter the workforce instead of attending post-secondary education, the government plans to provide students with the experience they need while still in school and a commitment to double the number of entrants to apprenticeship programs.

To help students plan and manage the costs of post secondary education the government implemented a range of initiatives: a five-year cap of tuition increase in most programs; and making sure the Ontario Student Assistant Programs provide assistance to all eligible students by creating new school scholarships and trust funds. This will also enable students to earn more from part-time work without it affecting the level of their Ontario student loan.

During the transition from old curriculum to new curriculum all applicants will be treated equally. All people applying for entrance will have to have a high school diploma or the equivalent of one with a minimum average of 60%. Six Grade 12 credits will also be necessary.

Ontario universities are committed to attracting the very best students from across Canada and around the world but the majority of students come from Ontario. New dorms are also under construction to help with the ever-increasing number of students.

Scholarships and financial assistant programs do vary from one university to another and there are many bursary programs to assist students with the finances. There will be, however, a greater competition for these top awards during the double cohort years.

Wilbermere hosts fish derby

At the end of summer, the Lake Wilbermere Land Owners' Association held its ninth annual Wilbermere Day fish derby and barbecue. Pat and Paddy Jordens hosted this exciting event again this year.

Adults of all ages and children from 18 months to 16 years of age tried their luck at fishing. The lucky winners of the fish derby in the children's categories were: Shaun MacDonald, largest fish; Lindsay Popit, largest number; Eric Popit, heaviest fish; Taylor Clydsdale, smallest rock bass; Dylan Clydsdale, largest perch, and 18-month-old Owen Strain, smallest fish. The adults were not so lucky as their total count was zero.

With no fire ban this year, members were able to cook the corn the old fashioned way in a big pot of boiling water over an open fire. The hot dogs were done on a gas barbecue. No outdoor event would be complete without roasting marshmallows over an open fire.

Fewer people (37) attended but everyone had a fabulous time, interacting with fellow landowners and enjoying the great outdoors. A round of applause to all volunteers for making this family event such a success.

High school's anti-smoking message seems to be working

NIKKI CAIRNS

HHSS Co-op Student

Three years ago if you were to look at the smoking section at Haliburton Highlands Secondary School there would be about 165 students. When you look at the section now, there are about 75 students, and that is partly because of Vice-Principal Irv Sternberg's anti-smoking campaign at the school.

When asked why he set this huge goal and put it into action, he replied, "It was a goal of mine three years ago. When I saw so many students smoking I felt the need to educate."

And that is exactly what he has done.

Mr. Sternberg, for three years in a row, has brought in guest speakers to talk to the new Grade 9 students about smoking, explaining to them that they don't need to smoke to fit in with their peers, and showing them a video which graphically illustrates the damaging effects of smoking and the harm it has caused people.

Not only does Mr. Sternberg feel that it is the school's responsibility, he also feels it is the responsibility of the parents and churches to educate teenagers about the hazards of smoking.

On September 24 Lorne Jordan, a spokesperson from the Haliburton Kawartha PineRidge Health Unit, spoke to the Grade 9 students about the laws against teen smoking.

It was an informative assembly where he introduced the "Tobacco Control Act" which became law in 1994.

DARREN LUM/Echo

The act was to deter young people from smoking, by enforcing the legal age to purchase smoking products to 19 years of age. The law also contains fines of up to $5,000 for the first offence of selling to minors. Subsequent fines range from $50,000 for a person or $75,000 for a corporation.

The Lung Association of Ontario has published statistics on smoking. It estimates that approximately 55% of young men and 51% of young women who start smoking at 15 years of age die before their 70th birthday if they continue to smoke.

Tobacco kills more than 40,000 Canadians a year; that is more than the total number of deaths from AIDS, traffic accidents, suicides, murder, fires or accidental poisonings.

It is estimated that the revenue accumulated from tobacco sales is well over $475,000,000 a year with the treatment needed for tobacco related diseases exceeding more than $2,600,000.

A Grade 10 student, who at the age of 12 took up the habit of smoking, thought it was the cool thing to do as all of her friends were doing it. She finds it very hard to quit what she calls "the gross habit," because both her parents and stepfather smoke. She knows she is addicted, and didn't think it would be hard to quit when she started.

A Grade 9 student who is a non-smoker said he would not take up the habit as he can see first-hand - his mom and stepdad both smoke - the ill effects smoking has on your health.

A group of Grade 9 student volunteers, under the supervision of Mr. Sternberg, has formed a committee to support students in their goal to quit smoking. It makes weekly public announcements, formed community partnerships, and has contests.

To anyone who is thinking on taking up the habit, don't do it. To everyone who is trying to quit, form a goal plan and run with it.

Take the bite out of rabies

Low-cost rabies vaccination clinics on Saturday offer protection to family pets

Low-cost rabies vaccination clinics for dogs and cats will be held at various locations in the area on Saturday, October 5. Cost of a rabies vaccination is $15. per animal, including tax. Most of the clinics will run from 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., but residents are urged to call their local Health Unit office to confirm specific times and locations.

The clinics are organized each year by local veterinarians to protect humans and animals alike from rabies - an infectious viral disease that can be fatal if left untreated.

"Canada is fortunate to have had only one death blamed on rabies in recent years, but we have to remain vigilant," says Anne Alexander, Director of Environmental Health with the Haliburton, Kawartha, Pine Ridge District Health Unit, which supports the rabies clinics.

She notes the rabies vaccination clinics come at a time when the disease has turned up in bats and other wildlife in parts of southern Ontario. A number of people believed to be exposed to rabid bats had to get vaccinated. Rabies in raccoons is also relatively new to the province.

Since dogs and cats are very susceptible to rabies and can easily spread it to their owners, Alexander says it's important to get family pets vaccinated.

While vaccinations for pets are mandatory locally, Alexander says the number of dogs and cats being given the rabies vaccination is small in comparison to the total number of family pets in the area.

Location of Rabies Clinics - Saturday, October 5, (all clinics run 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. unless specified otherwise).

Bancroft: Bancroft Veterinary Service and Faraday Animal Hospital: Bancroft Township Garage (10 a.m. - 2 p.m.) Hwy. 28 South at clinic.

Haliburton: Haliburton veterinary Service: Haliburton Firehall.

Wilberforce: Haliburton Veterinary Service: Wilberforce Arena (10 a.m. - 2 p.m.)

Marijuana-growing charges laid against Haliburton couple

A Haliburton couple face two charges after police seized approximately $16,000 worth of marijuana and growing equipment from their Haliburton home.

The man and woman, both in their early fifties, have been charged with the production of a substance and possession of a substance for the purpose of trafficking contrary to the Controlled Drugs and Substances Act.

A search warrant was executed at their house on September 25.
